The Unitarian Universalist Association's Statement on the Right to Bodily Autonomy

We affirm the Unitarian Universalist Association's statement on the right to bodily autonomy:

Decisions about children, families, and sexuality are some of life's most profound. Our Unitarian Universalist faith holds central the inherent worth and dignity of all people, which includes a belief in the sacredness of all bodies, and the importance of self-determination and human agency.

As part of a liberatory Reproductive Justice Movement, we affirm our commitment to building a world in which all people are able to make choices about their bodies, their health, and their families within safe, thriving communities. In practice, this commitment looks like working to ensure that:

- people of all identities and experiences have access to affirming, affordable health care, including reproductive care and abortion;
- people of every age can access comprehensive, sex-positive, fact-based sexuality education;
- people are empowered and supported to choose when, how, and if they will have children;
- our institutions and communities actively work to eradicate sexual violence, abuse, and coercion, and to heal the wounds of such harm;

- that people are supported to make informed, values-aligned decisions about their sexual and reproductive health throughout their lives.

We advocate for the ability of all families and communities to realize a sense of wholeness with regard to their sexual and reproductive lives. We create safe and healthy environments for children in our faith communities and campaign publicly for just and compassionate laws for family planning, reproductive and sexual health, and gender equity.

UUs have a special opportunity to present faith-based arguments for reproductive justice.

Abortion & Reproductive Healthcare Networks

Abortion networks are organizations that help people find safe, affordable abortions; either in the local area or in neighboring cities or states. Many networks provide transportation or pay for travel expenses as well as any health care related expenses.

Supporting these networks is a vital way to insure people have access to reliable, safe abortions and reproductive healthcare. These networks should be shared with the larger community or people who may need their services instead of offering to drive people to clinics or order medications for them. The networks have been doing this work for years and are well versed in the needs of patients and their care.
